Course Content:

The course content will consist of a balance between theoretical inputs and assignments, observation, and hand-on training. Differential inputs from respective departments will be planned, based on professional background and needs of the trainee. Specific competencies will be developed for each of the disciplines. For a given discipline, there will be some core competencies while other skills and competencies would be supplementary. Independent of the above points, we could divide the content into generic components and specialty components. Once everyone is trained in generic skills, specific skills could be honed by supervised clinical work under the specialty consultants.

The common course content will be: interviewing skills with children and adolescents; diagnostic algorithms for children and adolescents; communicating diagnosis to the child and family; psychoeducation with children, adolescents and their families; case conceptualization; planning intervention; liaison with other key members involved in the child's care, ethical and legal practice in child and adolescent mental health (including self-care and professional development of professionals). A compilation of reading material will be provided.
